

Disney family Parenting

Parentpedia Decoding Teen Lingo

What Experts Say

You've long since navigated baby babble and preschooler potty talk, so teen lingo should be a breeze, right? TWYT, newb. (That's shorthand for "That's what you think, newbie.")

Language is one way teenagers have always set themselves apart from adults (remember those coded diary entries from junior high?). With instant- and text-messaging acronyms and shorthand in constant, daily use, it's easier than ever for teens to communicate and harder for parents to understand them, as any parent knows who's been stumped by her child frantically IM'ing "PITR" -- "parent in the room."

So what's a befuddled parent to do, short of forcing Esperanto on her teen?...

What Do You Say?

Add a Question or Write an Answer

Most Recent Contributors:

OMG (oh my God), is this really the new lingo? What's a parent to do? Good news, there are websites that break down these acronyms. Net Lingo <http://www.netlingo.com/emailsh.cfm> has a very thorough acronym dictionary. You can always print it out and keep it nearby but be warned, as soon as you figure it out, it is going to change. That's just what teenagers do. BYKT (But You Knew That!)

Helpful Resources

Net Lingo

Parentpedia Decoding Teen Lingo

Related Topics

- Bad Attitudes
- Bulies - Pre-Teens and Teens
- Talking to Your Teen
- Cutting
- Drinking & Drugs
- Loners
- Lying
- Materialism
- Need for Independence
- Need for Privacy
- Over-Scheduling
- Peer Pressure
- Procrastination & Laziness
- Self-Esteem
- Tattoos & Piercings

Suggest A Topic

What Experts Say

You've long since navigated baby babble and preschooler poity talk, so teen lingo should be a breeze, right? TWYT, newb. (That's shorthand for "That's what you think, newbie.")

Language is one way teenagers have always set themselves apart from adults (remember those coded diary entries from junior high?). With instant- and text-messaging acronyms and shorthand in constant, daily use, it's easier than ever for teens to communicate and harder for parents to understand them, as any parent knows who's been stumped by her child frantically IMing "PiTR" – "parent in the room."

So what's a befuddled parent to do, short of forcing Esperanto on her teen?...

Disclaimer

show more

What Do You Say?

Ask or Answer

Add a Question or Write an Answer

Most Recent Contributors:
Jun 28, 2007 at 11:27:37 AM see all

OMG (oh my God), is this really the new lingo? What's a parent to do? Good news, there are websites that break down these acronyms. Net Lingo <http://www.netingo.com/emaish.cfm> has a very thorough acronym dictionary. You can always print it out and keep it nearby but be warned, as soon as you figure it out, it is going to change. That's just what teenagers do. BYKT (But You Knew That!)

Helpful Resources

Add A Resource

Net Lingo
August 03, 2007
 Not Acceptable?

Disclaimer

See All Topics A-Z

BOOKMARK

Search Parentpedia

Go!

Ages & Stages

- Pregnancy
- Babies
- Toddlers
- Preschoolers
- School Age
- Pre-Teens & Teens

Categories

- Milestones
- Behavior
- Care
- Eating & Nutrition
- Wellness
- Sleep
- Learning

All Topics A-Z | What is Parentpedia?

Advertisement

ParentPedia contains the opinions and views of other users. Given the interactive nature of ParentPedia, we cannot endorse, guarantee, or be responsible for the accuracy, efficacy, or veracity of any content generated by our users.

The contents of ParentPedia are intended for educational purposes only. Such contents are not intended to, and do not, constitute medical or healthcare advice or diagnosis, and may not be used for such purposes. Always seek the advice of your physician or other qualified health provider with any questions you may have regarding a medical condition. Reliance on information presented on ParentPedia is at your own risk.